

A Problem of Close Attention

The following happened when the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited a pomiculture institute.

He saw a fruit species-browsing program newly developed by the institute.

While examining the program displayed on the screen, he asked its officials if it was disseminated to all fruit farms.

When he was told that they failed to positively spread new sci-tech knowledge, he stressed: It is necessary to link all farms through the national network and take measures to disseminate to all officials and technicians in the fruit-farming sector the program which is of importance in developing fruit farming of the country.