

In the Indoor Terrapin Breeding Ground

One July day a few years ago, the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited the Pyongyang Terrapin Farm.

After making the rounds of different places in the farm, he made his way to the indoor terrapin breeding ground.

The officials asked him to refrain from going into the ground as the temperature and humidity there were very high at that time.

But he entered there without hesitation, saying that he did not care about them. Our scientists would feel disappointed when they are told that I went back without seeing unmanned carts for carrying and supplying feed developed by them, he added.

Seeing the unmanned carts, he praised the scientists time and again for making excellent machines.

He had given them the seeds for research and led them to achieve success.

And today, he came to the spot to see their products and appreciate them, in this regard of his own efforts.