

Number of Seats in a Dining Room

One October day in 2015, the respected Comrade Kim Jong Un visited a hostel for scientists.

After looking round the interior of the hostel, he dropped in at a dining room on the first floor. The officials felt happy as they could show him the dining room fully provided with all furnishings for the convenience of scientists.

But Comrade Kim Jong Un seemed to figure out something and asked an official how many seats were there in the dining room.

Listening to the answer, he said the number of seats was smaller than the accommodation capacity of the hostel.

Looking around the dining room again, the officials realized that they had attached importance only to enhancing the beauty of the structure.

After a while, Comrade Kim Jong Un taught them the ways to be tackled in case the scientists came to the hostel in groups.

Listening to what he had to say, the officials realized that they could become true servants of the people only when they put the latter's convenience and interests first in their consideration whenever designing anything and translating it into reality.
