

Attitude of a Revolutionary

The following happened one day several years ago.

The respected Comrade Kim Jong Un said to the senior officials of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea: We should solve, at any cost and as early as possible, the problems in improving not only the people's standard of living but the work of sci-tech dissemination and public health.

So, whatever the situation, I intend to promote the construction of regional-industry factories with that of sci-tech dissemination centre and hospital.

Looking around the officials, he continued: When a hospital and sci-tech dissemination centre are to be built in cities and counties, their appearance will change afresh and the Regional Development 20×10 Policy of our Party will not be confined only to the light industry sector but develop into a more wide-ranging and comprehensive one covering the public health, science and education sectors. We should set it as the main link in the whole chain of regional development to give priority to building a sci-tech dissemination centre and hospital in cities and counties.

Under the current situation, it is quite difficult for us to make the decision, but we must do it unconditionally. It is one of the most important revolutionary tasks for our Party to take responsible care of the people's health.

It is the attitude of a revolutionary to decide on the most difficult job in the most difficult situation and carry it out unconditionally.